Business Risk Service (BRS) provides qualitative analyses and forecasts for fifty countries three times per year (1 April, 1 August, and 1 December). The system offers long-established numerical assessments (historical, present, and future) for international executives. The ratings were refined in the 1960s and 1970s and offer comprehensive assessments of operating conditions, political risk, and the foreign exchange/ external accounts position for 50 important countries. The three perspectives are combined in a Composite Score. An Historical Ratings Research Package (HRRP) providing details for the 1980-2003 period is available. A supplemental report "Ratings for 50 Additional Countries" is also available, published with the August issue.

Each of the fifty countries has a two-page briefing. Four sections are included:

- Political Risk Index, Operations Risk Index, and Remittance & Repatriation Factor ratings together with the Composite Score. (1997-2003, Present, +1 Year, and +5 Years).
- The country's outlook covered in three to four bullets of eight to ten lines. The comments are forecast-oriented and clarify opportunities and problems.
- An Economic and Financial Information table giving statistics for critical indicator for 2001-2003, 2004F, and 2005F.
- Political Information including the governmental system, changes in government, and the most probable political scenario.

International executives must have a three-to five-year forecast horizon to plan and implement decisions successfully. Management must be capable of matching changes in business environments abroad with appropriate changes in corporate operations. Information from newspapers and the business press does not offer qualitative assessments and forecasts, and these are necessary to develop effective offensive or defensive strategies. BERI has over three decades of experience in identifying important trends that affect business operations around the globe.

Since 1966 BERI has consistently refined the system developed by the firm to evaluate risks faced by companies with international operations. Executives benefiting from this experience potentially have a strategic advantage.

- BRS is a monitoring service published three times per year. All 50 countries are covered in each issue.
- A Profit Opportunity Recommendation (POR) is given for each country in each issue. It states whether the business environment merits investment, contracts for medium and long-term relationships, transaction-by-transaction trade, or no business relations.
- BERI's rating system permits comparisons between countries for the past, the present, and for one- and five-year forecast periods. The components are the Operations Risk Index (ORI), the Political Risk Index (PRI), and the Remittance and Repatriation Factor (R-Factor).
- Qualitative judgments and candid assessments of such factors as corruption make the reports uniquely valuable. A permanent panel of 108 senior bank, company, and government officials provides the input for ratings on operating conditions (ORI) in each country. A second panel of 102 experts helps pinpoint areas of pivotal political change and provides ratings on sociopolitical conditions (PRI).

- The Remittance and Repatriation Factor (R Factor) Rating is produced by a large computer program that manipulates over 14000 cells of data and makes hundreds of calculations for each R Factor rating and the four subindices.
- Each issue of BRS includes a Statistical Appendix with criteria details, subindices, and historical ratings on the 50 countries listed below (Basic Subscription Country List).

BRS SUPPLEMENTS:

FORLEND – Country Risk Forecast for International Lenders

FORELEND provides executives in banks and corporations with perspective on the capacity and willingness of 50 countries to meet obligations in convertible currency during a five-year period. It is published 1 April, 1 August, and 1 December. All 50 countries are covered in each issue.

Lending funds or extending credit to clients abroad involves risk. This risk has increased in many cases but decreased in others. BERI uses a set of complex variables, often unfamiliar to those involved in domestic operations, to answer such questions as: Are central bank reserves adequate to cover foreign exchange demands? Will a change in government policy restrict the outflow of convertible currency? Will certain industries or firms be provided favored exchange rates or access to foreign exchange?

Each of the fifty countries has a two-page briefing. Four sections, two on each page, are included:

- Lender's Risk Quantitative (LRquant), Lender's Risk Qualitative (LRqual), Lender's Risk Environment (LREnvir) and the Composite Score. (1997-2003, Present, +1 Year, and +5 Years).
- The country's outlook covered in three to four bullets of eight to ten lines. The comments are forecast-oriented and clarify lending opportunities and problems.
- An Economic and Financial Information table giving statistics for critical indicators for 2001-2003, 2004F, and 2005F.
- Political Information including the governmental system, changes in government, and the most probable political scenario.

FORELEND makes sense of often conflicting clues about future inflows and outflows of capital and the promptness of debt service. Using a computerized quantitative system refined over many years, BERI provides exclusive, comprehensive ratings that gauge a country's capacity to remain current on payments. Unlike many other forecasting firms, BERI also analyzes the qualitative elements and willingness to pay interest and principal.

- FORELEND is a monitoring service that analyzes economic, financial, monetary and political developments in 50 key countries.
- Each country is covered in a concise, two-page analysis. Charts and statistics allow instant analysis of trends.
- The lender's risk ratings permits cross-country comparisons. It is a weighted score comprised of a computerized quantitative rating (ability of a country to raise the needed foreign exchange to meet debt obligations), a qualitative rating (competence, corruption, loan profile, etc.), and a political/economic rating (stability of the nation's power structure and direction of the economy).
- Each country begins with a Recommended Lender Action (RLA). Descriptive information on the reasoning behind the RLA and ratings allows lenders to draw independent conclusions.
- One permanent panel of 108 senior bank, company, and government officials provides ratings for economic, financial and operating conditions in each country, and a second panel of 102 experts assesses sociopolitical factors. These judgments are the basis for each country's political/economic rating.

- BERI's system for qualitative analysis provides perspective that is carefully screened for factual accuracy, clarity of presentation, and consistency with past performance and present conditions. Brief statements (bullets) summarize the key issues.
